 "Surviving the Upturn – Planning for the New Normal"
 Barry Cain – Blackman, Kallick, Chicago, IL

Barry will discuss how businesses today, more than ever, need to view their worlds differently and act differently. "Businesses simply can't rebuild what they had and expect the same results they had previously. Their customers, suppliers and employees will not be trusting quite so easily, if ever. They can't wait for what others will do--they will need to be the "other" and create new paths to long-term success with a sense of urgency."

Participants will be challenged to understand what this "new normal" may mean for them and how to seize opportunities presented. Blackman Kallick is the ninth largest accounting and business advisory services firm in Chicago. Their practice involves providing audit, tax and consulting services principally for closely-held and family-owned companies. For information on Blackman Kallick, go to www.BlackmanKallick.com.
